This program is designed to prepare students for employment in art galleries and museums. Students are provided a comprehensive knowledge of art history, art criticism, collections management, the contemporary art market, artist's rights, contracts, intellectual property, and copyright law. Through projects and field experience, students develop skills in gallery design, installation, lighting, applied gallery photography, web applications, graphic marketing materials and object care and handling. Students apply the principles of gallery management through supervised internship placement into a gallery, museum or non-profit art center in Santa Fe, the third largest art market in the United States.

The completion of the Gallery Management A.A.A. degree transfers to the College of Contemporary Native Arts as the first two years of the B.A. in Museum Studies.

The AAA and AAS degree are designed to prepare students for entry level positions in specific occupations. The AAA and AAS are not generally intended to transfer to four year colleges. Students should select all SFCC courses in consultation with an advisor. In addition, students should speak with an SFCC advisor if planning to transfer.
